Ephesians 4:17-28

Context

A close-up photograph of a pile of apples. In the center, a single apple is relatively fresh with red and yellow skin. Surrounding it are several other apples that are heavily decayed, showing brown, shriveled, and moldy textures. The background is dark, making the apples stand out.

Ephesians
4:29

Matthew
12:33-37

A close-up photograph of a pile of apples. In the center, a single apple is relatively fresh, showing its characteristic red and yellow stripes. Surrounding it are several other apples in various stages of decay. Some are heavily bruised, with brown and black spots, while others are completely rotten, appearing shriveled and covered in a thick, white, fuzzy mold. The background is dark, making the colors of the apples stand out.

What to do

A close-up photograph of several bright green apples. In the center, one apple is significantly different: it is a dark, mottled red color and appears to be rotting or bruised. The text 'Ephesians 4:29' is overlaid on the top left, and 'Why?' is overlaid on the rotten apple.
